Pleasure Cruises

arranged by the Hamburg-Amerika Linie.

IF anyone, twenty years ago, had maintained that a time was approaching when long sea-voyages would be undertaken merely for pleasure, he would have been considered a visionary. The great stream of pleasure-travellers now beginning to overflow the seas, may be reckoned among the manifold wonders that enrich modern life. Formerly, the shores of the Continent bounded the love of travelling. The sea was crossed only when duty, or compulsion made it unavoidable, for the sea-voyage was considered a sore though necessary evil. And to-day? Thousands cross the Ocean every year exclusively for pleasure's sake, urged by an ever-increasing desire to make personal acquaintance with foreign lands and nations, for nothing is more calculated to widen views and procure new connections.

Abbazia.

It is true that the new mode of comfortable and enjoyable travelling by sea was not invented in Germany, but owing to the efforts made by the Hamburg-Amerika Linie it has there reached its highest development. An attempt was previously made in England, but only small vessels were used for pleasure-trips. The Hamburg-Amerika Linie on the contrary, placed its best, its fleetest and its most luxurious express-steamers at the service of pleasure-seekers, and the success of the experiment surpassed all expectations. The new mode of travelling quickly became popular. Ships have been transformed into floating palaces, and the traveller who makes one of them his temporary abode, not only enjoys the sea in all its grandeur, but is also carried from country to country, quickly, pleasantly, and comfortably, and experiences the pleasure of constant travelling without the trouble of perpetual packing, without any change of hotel or the daily feeing of fresh servants. Besides all these advantages, he catches his first glimpse of foreign lands and towns from their most picturesque side, namely from the sea, and thus comes to regard a pleasure-cruise as an ideal mode of travelling. The traveller, who formerly could only reach the most historically interesting and picturesquely beautiful countries and sites along the Mediterranean coast, by means of very slow vessels which had to be constantly changed and had little or no agreement with the time-tables, and failed to gratify the most modest demands, can now be transported in a floating palace from place to place in real princely comfort, and each time he lands he finds everything carefully prepared, so that he may enjoy without difficulty or loss of time, all that is of importance or interest to him. By paying a fixed sum he is even delivered from the extortion proverbial in the East, and can place himself entirely under the care and protection of a competent Travelling Agency as long as he remains on shore. And while he is revelling in historical reminiscences, and enjoying Art and Scenery, his abode on board, in which he has comfortably ensconced himself, remains quite untouched, and every time he returns to the splendid ship, the feeling is renewed, that he is re-treading a bit of home, which has faithfully accompanied him to foreign and far distant lands. At the same time, the princely arrangements, the excellent table and the healthy sojourn on board, are felt to be of lasting benefit to body and mind, whilst the effect on both intellect and temperament, renders sea-voyages invaluable for the purpose of culture and education. Pleasure-cruises have played their part in drawing nations together, and in bringing to pass a brisker exchange of their material and intellectual productions and the Hamburg-Amerika Linie by promoting this new mode of visiting foreign countries, is also doing something to advance the Culture of the Future.

Syracuse.

Pleasure-cruises have been established by the Hamburg-Amerika Linie since 1891. Since that year their express-steamers have carried every year many hundreds to the Mediterranean, to the old seats of Culture in the East, to the extreme northern point of Europe, and beyond it to Spitzbergen, to the West Indies and Venezuela. What is the appearance of the world to the home-keeping man? Little more than a mere map or globe conveying no idea of the places named upon it. Only by personal contact can acquaintance be made with the wide world, but formerly only a few professional travellers or explorers were able to gain such acquaintance. But pleasure-cruises have done much to enlarge the circle of those who wish to learn more of foreign lands, for all who take part in a pleasure-cruise generally awaken in their relatives, friends, and neighbours, the liveliest interest in their proceedings. Thus many travellers are led to communicate by pen or pencil their impressions of foreign lands, and these interesting accounts and pictures find their way into newspapers and books, and thus reach the eye of a still larger circle of readers. In this way Art and Literature assist many who participate in pleasure-cruises to extend to thousands of persons a more intimate knowledge of far distant countries.

An extensive knowledge of Nature leads to a practical extension of geography and ethnography. And a company of pleasure-trippers by dividing itself into several different parties of workers, increases the sum of its experiences. Some will occupy themselves with observing the animal and vegetable worlds by sea and land; others will record changes of temperature, the position of the stars, the difference in time, &c. One catches with his photographic apparatus the pictures offered by Ocean and Continent, whilst a Nimrod tries to bring down rare animals, and all endeavour by watchful curiosity to find out as much as they can of the secrets of navigation from the Captain, the Officers and the Engineers.

Such pleasure-cruises afford a powerful stimulus to Trade and Commerce. Naturally those who take part in them, are generally wealthy, and ready to form connections with persons of equally good position in the world. Such meetings are not only of social value but may also exercise considerable influence over Commerce as they frequently lead to lasting business connections. Knowledge is gained of foreign markets and products, and industries, and such knowledge gives an impetus to the exchange of values and goods.

The pleasure-trips of the Hamburg-Amerika Linie have already won many friends and devotees for sea-voyages, and made the thought of such voyages familiar and pleasant. The man compelled to travel for commercial or other purposes yields to the necessity of the sea-transit as an unavoidable evil, which he must accordingly meet and endure. He counts the hours till his arrival. How different the traveller for pleasure! For him the voyage is its own object, and every charm it presents, he will fully enjoy. The glorious cruise alone affords him pleasure. So by his example he canvasses for travelling by sea and helps to overcome many an old prejudice, which, until then, had been opposed to all sea-faring. He who, after steaming from Hamburg about noon, has passed Heligoland, whilst sipping his coffee at ease on deck, after a comfortable dinner, and, after a good night's sleep, has opened his eyes in full view of the Norwegian coast, becomes an Apostle of Sea-travelling.

Now it will be clear even to the outsider that the expectations which First Class travellers are warranted in cherishing during a pleasure-trip by sea, can only be perfectly realised, either by ships which like the express-steamers of the Hamburg-Amerika Linie, serve year after year for the conveyance of cabin passengers, who make the highest demands, or with ships which have been from the very beginning destined for pleasure-cruises only, and therefore offer in their build and all their fittings a guarantee for the greatest possible comfort of the passengers. The Hamburg-Amerika Linie fulfils both premises. It has appointed one of its finest steamers, employed in the New York service, the twin-screw steamer "Moltke" to carry out a number of these cruises, it has commissioned the "Meteor", which was specially built for pleasure-cruises, and just recently the "Oceana".

The

which is exclusively devoted to pleasure cruises, is a large twin-screw steamer of 3600 tons with accommodation for about 290 passengers and eminently fulfils the requirements of this new form of travelling. The spacious cabins each contain only one or two berths, they are provided with electric light, bells, &c., and are warmed by steam. A particularly large and airy dining-room admits of all the passengers taking their meals simultaneously. On the saloon-deck a handsome music and drawing room, to which a library is attached, and a comfortable smoking-room, are at the traveller's disposal. The type of this steamer's build and the reduced cost of her working and maintenance, make it possible to afford all this comfort and yet reduce the fares for these cruises to a minimum, without in any way diminishing the attractions invariably offered by the Hamburg-Amerika Linie to its passengers. For instance, the average expense per day of a tour by the "Meteor" hardly amounts to more than the daily cost of sojourn in a good hotel in Switzerland, and it must also be borne in mind that a hotel supplies only board and lodging, whereas the "Meteor" offers in addition a cruise in the steamer.

Another steamer, which in 1906 was added to the fleet reserved for Pleasure Cruises, is the "Oceana".

This ship was thoroughly overhauled and reconstructed, in order to specially fit her for her new purpose, and enable her to rank as high as the other steamers destined by the Hamburg-Amerika Linie for pleasure-cruise traffic. The steamer registers about "Meteor" – Drawing-room.

8000 tons, commands splendid saloons and state-rooms, a gymnasium, a very spacious promenade-deck, and, among many other agreeable features, is specially distinguished by a particularly large number of single-berth cabins for passengers travelling alone.

The third vessel which the Hamburg-Amerika Linie has destined for pleasure-cruises, during the coming winter and spring, is the universal favorite, the large trans-atlantic twin-screw mail-steamer

"Moltke".

In the building of this steamer in 1902, all recent improvements in the art of modern ship-building were applied, so that she guarantees a degree of safety and comfort hitherto unsurpassed. Serving chiefly in the traffic between Genoa and New York for cabin-passengers who make the highest demands, attention was also given, when building this steamer, to requirements incidental to the tropics, such as lofty and airy social rooms, large vestibules, roomy cabins, extensive promenade-decks, broad through-passages for purposes of ventilation, and many other similar advantages, which thus became prominent characteristics of this vessel.

Provided with three such excellent and first-rate steamers as the "Meteor", "Oceana" and "Moltke", the Hamburg-Amerika Linie is able to draw up a pleasure-cruise programme for 1908, which in variety, surpasses the most successful undertakings of previous years.

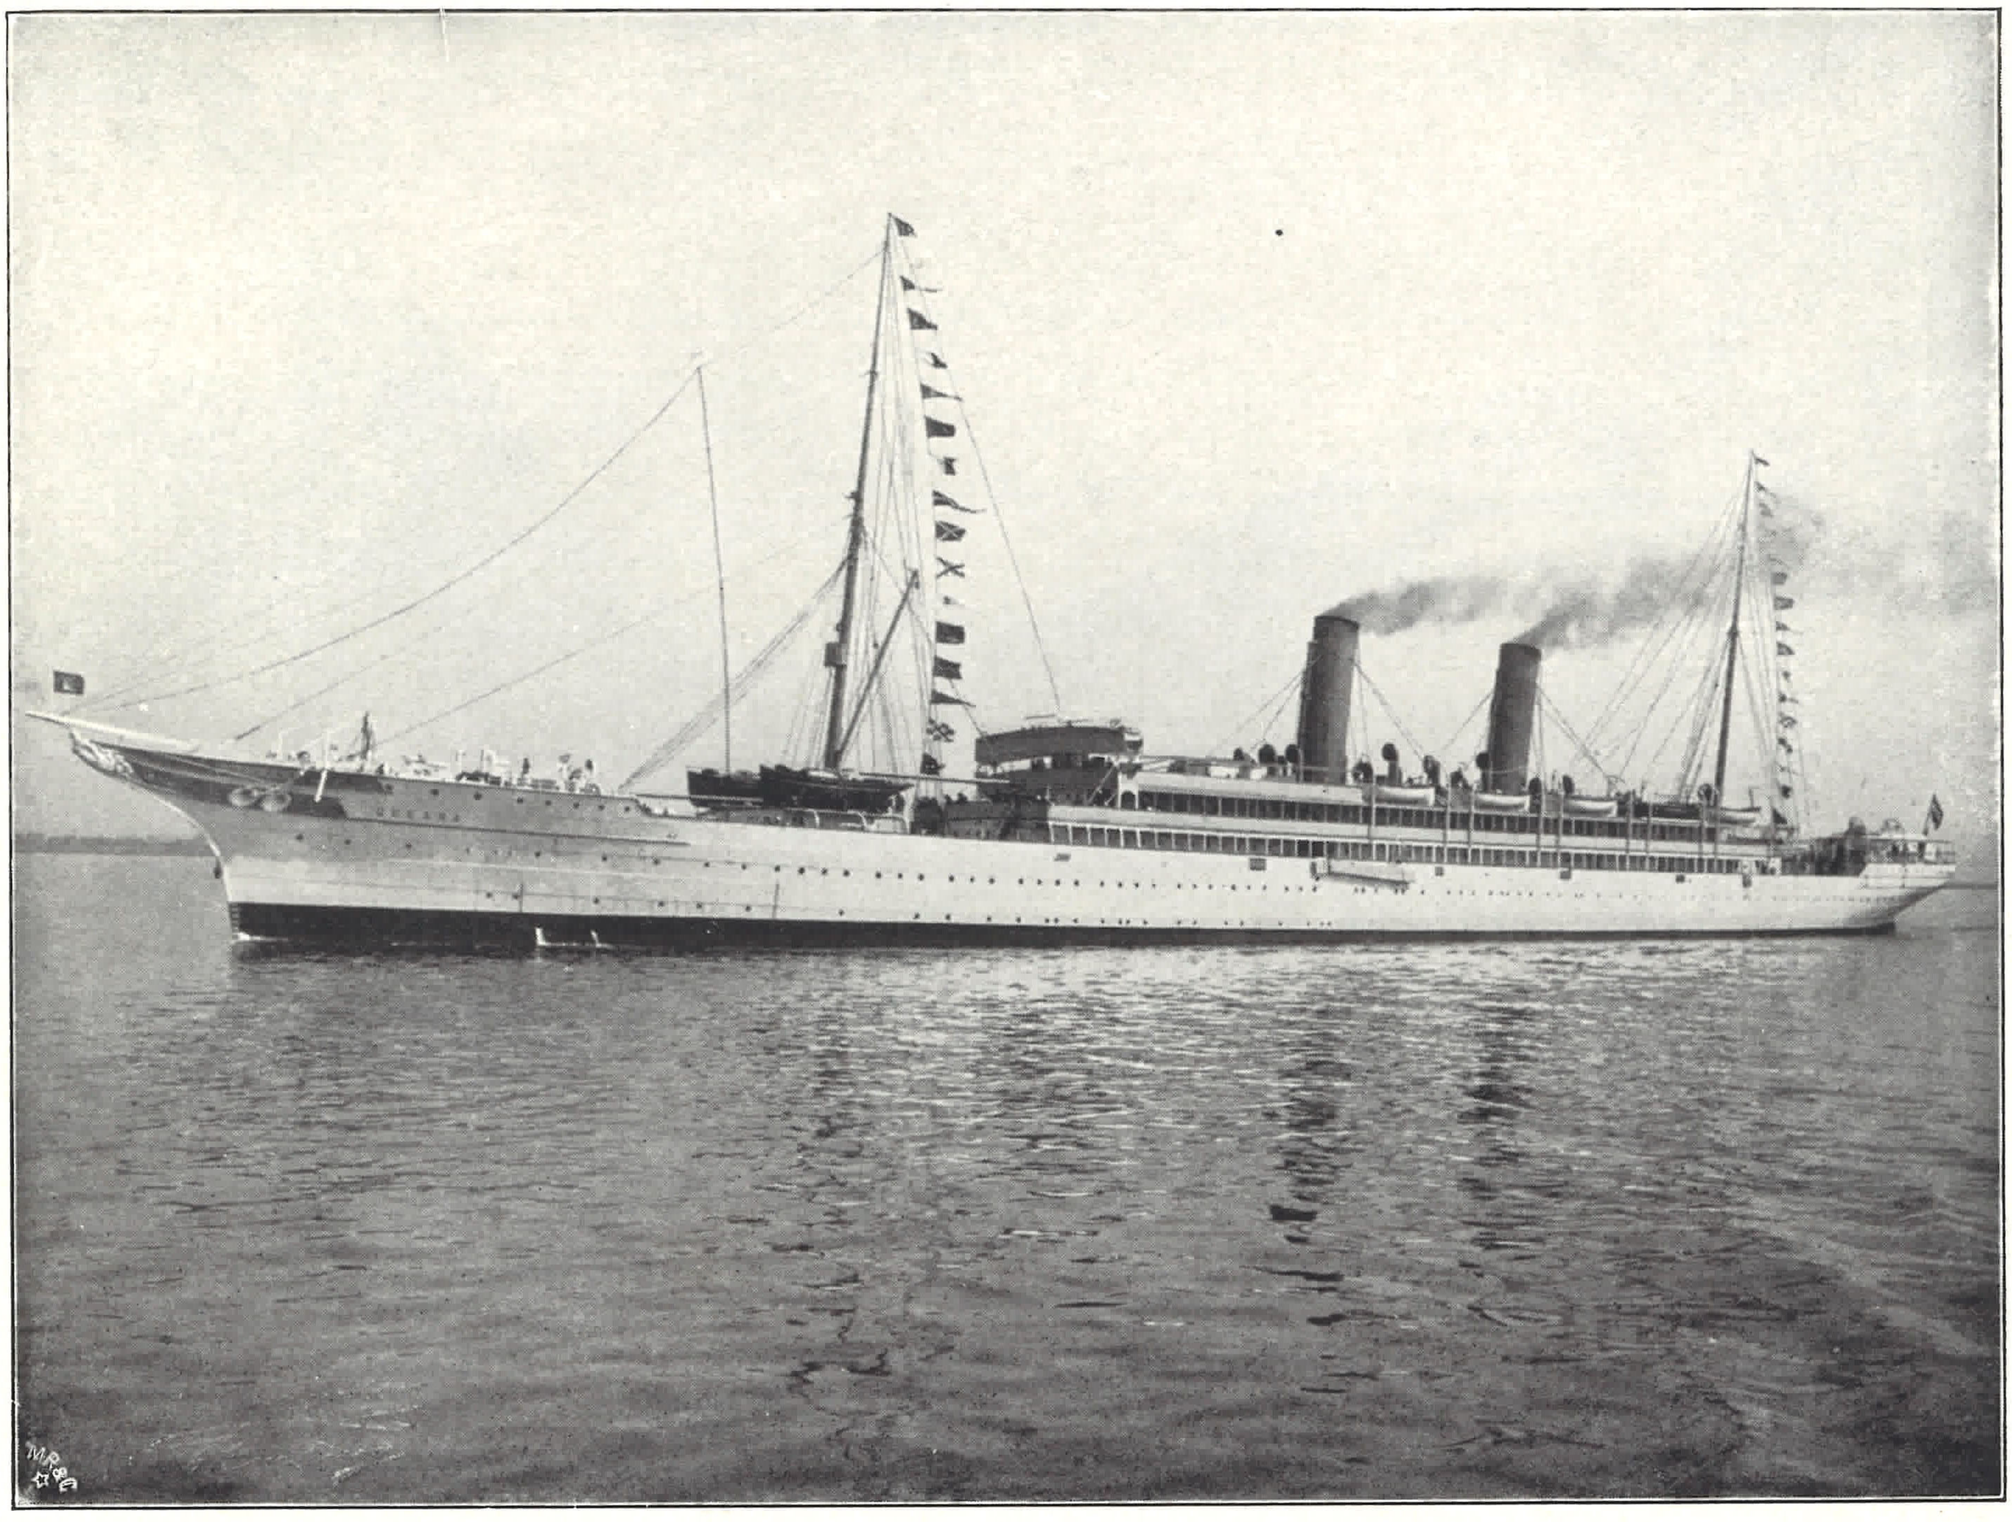

"Blücher" – Grill-room.

Thus to all who desire to leave behind them the troubles and anxieties of daily life, and devote themselves for a time to recreation and pleasure, and, at the same time, increase their knowledge of foreign countries and customs, the Hamburg-Amerika Linie offers so excellent a choice of carefully designed and interesting travelling routes, that no one can fail to find among them, one that will assuredly gratify his own personal inclinations and desires.

A summary of the itineraries, and fares for each cruise, are contained in this pamphlet.

The Hamburg-Amerika Linie's Pleasure Cruises from a Medical Point of View.

The Health-Giving Properties of Sea-Air.

Even in olden times, Physicians were acquainted with the sea's healing properties. Hippocrates the philosopher and physician; Aulus Cornelius Celsus, the great doctor, who lived during the reign of the Emperor Tiberius; and other physicians, turned to the Sea for the prevention and cure of diseases, and also to harden and strengthen the human body. Indeed the Romans went on sea-voyages in obedience to medical prescription and advice. Unfortunately all these ancient practices fell into disuse during the Middle Ages. Not until modern times, did doctors begin again to turn their attention to the healing virtues of the sea. At present they employ them more and more in the service of suffering humanity, and urge their patients more than ever to take advantage of them.

It is the sea-air, which, above all things, exerts such a beneficial influence on human health, for sea-air has properties that no land-climate can offer, properties not to be found in any medicine, and not producible even by the most ingeniously contrived apparatus.

Sea-air is absolutely free from dust and germs! Wherever we may be on land, we are surrounded by an atmospheric stratum containing dust, soot, mineral substances, the pollen and fibres of plants, and the germs that propagate disease; and this atmospheric layer, especially in large towns, lies like lead upon our respiratory organs; but at sea, we breathe a pure, unadulterated atmosphere, and inhale air that is rich in oxygen and delicious ozone, and impregnated with common salt and bromine. Consequently at sea, one breathes more easily and exuberantly; and this improves the state of the blood, and raises the whole tone of the bodily health and strength.

The presence of Bromine in the air, acts most soothingly upon the nervous system, and a similar effect cannot be produced by anything on land. It is also a fact, long since known and proved by doctors, that sea-air greatly stimulates and promotes the assimilation of food, and that process of combustion, which plays so large a part in our bodies, and to which we owe our warmth and life and health. As a consequence of this, the appetite is increased in the most unexpected manner. The taking of nourishment with more appetite and zest, augments the secretions, increases the bodily powers, reddens the cheeks, and gives nerve-force and elasticity to the muscles. Thus a whole store of energy is conserved solely in the sea-air. "Thalasso-Therapy", that branch of medical science which seeks to establish and employ the sea as a sanative remedy, emphatically ascribes curative virtues to sea-air alone. And because these virtues are latent in the air itself, people who go to the sea-side in search of it, often fail to perceive its expected effects; for, if the wind blow from the land, the bathing-resort, though on the sea-coast, entirely misses this most effective agent. Pure, unadulterated, and atomically valuable sea-air, is only to be had on the high seas!

And if at a time of year, when on land, Nature is benumbed with ice and cold, and one is obliged during the greater part of the day to breathe the arid, dusty, stifling atmosphere of close rooms, if then over the sea an ever blue sky is smiling, and the warm sunlight streams down, – which is actually the case on the Mediterranean Sea, during the whole winter, – then surely one must acknowledge that such a sea, is of all places the most highly favoured health-resort, that one can possibly conceive.

This greatest of health-resorts, the Mediterranean Sea, is no longer closed against those who need to recover from illness. The Hamburg-Amerika Linie by means of its Pleasure Cruises, has opened the way to the Mediterranean, and made it easily accessible even to those in search of health. And the number of those who use the Pleasure Cruises in order to regain health, steadily increases; so also does the number of doctors who recommend their patients to go on such a voyage instead of staying at some sea-side place or sanatorium.

A scientific, but universally intelligible statement of the specific effect of a sea-climate upon health, and a detailed description of the climate of the Mediterranean Sea, is given in a book recently published under the following title:

Die Hygiene des Meeres.

Populär-medizinischer Führer für Seereisende von Dr. med. H. Paull, dirig. Arzt der Anstalt für physikalische Heilmethoden in Karlsruhe i. B.

(Sea-Hygiene, Popular Medical Guide for Travellers by Sea, by H. Paull M. D., Head-Physician of the Establishment for Physical Therapeutics at Karlsruhe). Published by the Author. Price M. 3.50, to be had at all booksellers or direct from the Author. This book can be most warmly recommended to all who have already been on sea-cruises or think of taking them. It is the outcome of personal experience and written for the purpose of drawing attention to the specific and health-giving properties of the sea. It will be an excellent guide to those who are seeking to benefit their health by a sea-voyage. The book is therefore well worth reading by both the healthy and the sick.

From its valuable contents we may mention here the following principal themes.

Venice.

General Information.

Fares.

The fares for the Cruises by the Steamers "Moltke", Oceana" and "Meteor" are to be understood per berth. On these steamers there are a number of single-berth cabins for passengers wishing to travel alone; in all the other rooms not more than two persons are placed.

Booking of Berths.

Berths are secured by depositing one third of the fare. The balance of the passage-money must be paid not later than on the day before the steamer sails. If, contrary to expectation, the cruise cannot take place, notice will be given in due time and the deposit refunded in full.

Lisbon – Praca Don Pedro.

The earlier berths are ordered, the greater will be the number of available rooms from which a selection may be made. Berths are very frequently all taken long before sailing-date. It is therefore advisable to secure accommodation as early as possible and a list is issued every week showing clearly which berths are vacant. The Company will be pleased to forward these lists free of charge to intending passengers.

Refunding of Tickets or Deposit-Receipts.

If a passenger, for whom a berth has been reserved, withdraws from the cruise, the deposit is forfeited. When notice of withdrawal is given so timely that the Company succeeds in selling the berth to others, the Company is, as a rule, prepared to allow the deposit to count as part-payment of the passenger's passage for another of the Company's cruises taking place within one year.

Validity of Tickets and Deposit-Receipts.

Every ticket and deposit-receipt is personal and cannot be transferred to another person, except by the permission of the Company.

Naples.

Shore-Excursions.

The obligation of the Hamburg-Amerika Linie towards the passengers is restricted to the cruise to the places called at by the steamers and does not extend to the arranging of shore-excursions, ordering of vehicles, landing and embarking of passengers, &c.

The shore-excursions in connection with these cruises will be arranged by the Reisebureau der Hamburg-Amerika Linie, 8, Unter den Linden, Berlin, whose aim it will be to make the passengers' stay on shore as profitable and pleasant as possible. The following payments will entitle a passenger to take part in all the excursions arranged on shore by our Tourist Office, and published in a special prospectus:

M.	200.—	for	the	first	Mediterranean Cruise
„	200.—	„	„	second	„ „
„	160.—	„	„	third	„ „
„	175.—	„	„	fourth	„ „
„	110.—	„	„	fifth	„ „

If possible, names should be entered for the shore-excursions as soon as berths are secured on board the steamer; as no absolute guarantee can be given that applications made later, or after embarkation, will receive attention.

In the case of the Grand Cruise to the Orient by S.S. "Moltke" the inclusive charge for the shore excursions from all ports called at by the steamer varies from M. 890.— to M. 1150.— according to the routes selected in Egypt, Palestine and Syria. Passengers are not obliged to take part in all the excursions.

Baggage.

Passenger's baggage may be forwarded in advance to the Company's Agents at port of embarkation, for delivery on board. It must, however, be despatched sufficiently early to ensure its arrival some days before departure of the steamer, and each piece should be clearly marked with the owner's name.

The Bill of Lading for baggage sent, for instance, in advance to Genoa, should be addressed as follows:

Hamburg-Amerika Linie, 4, Via Roma, Genoa,

for ..... (name)

Passenger by S.S. ..... (name of steamer)

sailing on the ..... (date)

Passengers are recommended to keep with them small pieces of baggage, such as hand-bags, satchels, &c. and to take them on board with them on embarkation.

No freight is charged for baggage on board the steamer.

Meals.

On board the "Meteor" all the passengers take their meals together in one large saloon, but on the "Moltke" and "Oceana" there are two dining-rooms, one on the saloon-deck and the other on the upper-deck; passengers by the "Moltke" whose cabins are numbered from 1 to 321 are appointed seats in the saloon-deck dining-room and those whose cabins run from 401 to 536, are seated in the upper-deck dining-room. On the "Oceana", the meals of passengers paying M. 1400.— and upwards, per berth, for their passage, are served in the saloon-deck dining-room; all other passengers take their meals in the Captain's dining-room on the upper-deck. No difference whatsoever is made in the quality of the meals provided.

Passports.

Passengers should provide themselves with passports. They are absolutely necessary for the Turkish dominions, including Egypt and Palestine, and must be certified by the respective consular officers before entering Turkish jurisdiction. The most convenient way will be to have passports viséd in advance by the consul of Turkey residing nearest to the passengers's home.

Physician.

An experienced physician is attached to every steamer. For medical attendance in cases of sickness contracted on board no charge is made; medicines also are provided free of charge.

Off Spalato.

Barber.

The ship's barber is entitled to make a charge for his services.

Money and Travellers' Cheques.

It is not absolutely necessary to provide one's self with the money current in the different countries visited. English and French money is accepted everywhere. Travellers who take their money with them in cash, can deposit it in the purser's safe but the Company declines all responsibility.

For the convenience of the travelling public, the Hamburg-Amerika Linie has brought into circulation, cheques issued by its Reisebureau in Berlin and drawn upon the Berlin Disconto-Gesellschaft. These cheques are for six different sums, namely for 50 marks, 100 marks, 10, 20, 50 and 100 dollars. On each cheque is specified its current value in various foreign countries, so that the cheque can be exchanged for that amount in the respective countries, but in countries, the currency of which is not specified on the cheque, it is paid at the current rate of exchange. These travellers' cheques are payable at about 2000 different places, distributed all over the world, and enumerated in a special list; they are also accepted, instead of money by all the Agents of the Hamburg-Amerika Linie and the pursers on board its steamers.

Mount of Olives near Jerusalem.

These cheques may be obtained, not only from the Hamburg-Amerika Linie in Hamburg and its Reisebureau in Berlin but also from the Company's Agencies in Breslau, Dresden, Frankfort o. M., Leipsic, Munich and Wiesbaden, as well as from some of its American establishments.

News of the Cruises for Friends at home.

For the convenience of passengers, arrangements have been made whereby each passenger can send in to the Hamburg-Amerika Linie, Abteilung Personenverkehr, Hamburg, the names and addresses of relatives or friends to whom he wishes communications about his cruise to be sent. The news arriving by telegraph from the Captain concerning the voyage, arrival of the steamer at the various ports and other interesting events, will then be forwarded by postcard to such addresses free of charge. By this arrangement the passengers' relatives, friends and acquaintances at home, will receive news about the cruises more quickly than they would do if they had to depend solely on the communications received by letter direct from the passengers.

For the furtherance of this undertaking names and addresses should be sent in as early as possible.
